

Lake Elementaita & Soysambu Conservancy - A wild paradise

Lake Elementaita & Soysambu Conservancy

Lake Elementaita is an alkaline lake that lies between Lake Naivasha and Lake Nakuru on the Rift Valley floor. Lake Nakuru has been named the pink lake owing to over 2 million flamingos and pelicans that thrived on the algae and salt lake goodies. This is no longer the case owing to floods, pollution and other factors that caused mass migrations to other lakes, more especially Lake Elementaita. Even in less-than-optimum conditions, though, Lake Elementaita is a paradise for bird lovers, offering more than 450 species, including migratory birds from Europe and other locations.

The Elementaita and Soysambu areas are much less visited than other natural attractions in the region, so you enjoy a sense of privacy and solitude in a wondrous volcanic landscape. We RECOMMEND this destination for those seeking a quiet relaxed and private time. Good for honeymooners, couples and families.
